NEMO and the Nuclear Institute are partnering to deliver the inaugural Industry Conference and Gala Dinner.

Set within the historic surroundings of Trinity House, incorporated by Henry VIII in 1514 and overlooking the Tower of London, this exclusive event will bring together senior leaders from across government, industry, regulation, academia and international organisations to discuss the future of advanced nuclear technologies.

The conference programme will feature keynote addresses, panel discussions and industry insights from policymakers, regulators, technology developers, operators, classification societies, insurers and investors. Topics will include advanced nuclear deployment, maritime applications, regulation and licensing, safety and security, financing and insurance, workforce development, ports and infrastructure, and international collaboration.

As the conference closes, guests will enjoy an evening drinks reception, providing valuable opportunities to connect with industry leaders, policymakers and key decision-makers. The day will culminate in a prestigious black-tie Gala Dinner featuring three courses of exceptional cuisine provided by award-winning caterers The Clink, whose profits are reinvested into charitable programmes supporting rehabilitation and reducing reoffending.
